Thirdly, to the langent of the same distance, add the Concant of the & appar vent Altitude, and the proportional logarithm, again, of the & HP, the sum rejecting

20 in the index , will be the PL of the second angle .-

Add these angles tregether, if the distance is more than go, but sub truct if less. The sum, or difference of there angles, must be added to the corrected distance, if the I angle is less than the second, and the distance less Than go, but if otherwise subtracted.

But if the distance is greater than go, the sum of the angles, must be subtracted, from the corrected distance, which will give the true Distance.
